Last night (April 22nd) the Tribeca Film Festival party scene was in full swing with filmmakers, stars and industry professionals celebrating the premieres of the night.

Inside the Meatpacking District's RdV the cast and producers of "Beware The Gonzo" partied, courtesy of MOFILM, for nearly four hours with an open bar sponsored by and Stoli. The film, which features young actors like Nickelodeon's Zoë Kravitz, singer Jesse McCartney and Erza Miller, premiere at the BMCC downtown. Also in attendance, cast member Judah Friedlander who stars as the cafeteria worker at the kids' school.

It was refreshing to see this wasn't a touch and go stop at the venue for the stars Kravitz and McCartney, the two stayed the duration of the fête talking to fans and collaborator. Ms. Zoë, daughter of musician Lenny Kravitz, told us that the cast got along very well during filming and that seemed to resonate at the party as well.

On the other side of the island, in the Lower East Side's Libation, Meryl Streep's daughter Grace Gummer, Norman Reedus, Jonathan Tucker and the rest of the team for indie film "Meskada" celebrated their first screening at Village East Cinemas. In addition to an open bar, Stoli also featured a photo booth where stars of the film and attendees were encouraged to pose with props and treated to free copies of their pictures.

Interview with Susan Sarandon: trying to

Beware The Gonzo follows Eddie "Gonzo" Gilman as he starts a print revolution. When the wild-eyed rebel journalist is ousted from his prep school's newspaper by its über-popular editor, Eddie fronts an underground movement to give a voice to all the misfits, outcasts, and nerds. Soon the power of the press is in Eddie's hands... but will he use it wisely? Ezra Miller, Jesse McCartney, Zoë Kravitz, Campbell Scott and Amy Sedaris star in the pitch-perfect teen comedy.

Meskada, written and directed by Josh Sternfeld, follows a small-town detective named Noah Cordin as he struggles to solve the brutal murder of a boy in the peaceful, affluent town of Hilliard. The killers left behind no clues at the crime scene, with the exception of a scrap of paper leading Cordin back to his hometown of Caswell. Here, Cordin and county detective Leslie Spencer consult with Cordin's old friends, all of whom are suffering from the economic troubles that have plunged Caswell into near-destitution. As their search fails to turn up a suspect, feverish tensions rise between the towns of Hilliard and Caswell, until the film reaches its shocking climax.

Though the parties are "invite only" there are numerous Tribeca Film Festival activities that are open to the public. Tonight they will host a screening of Tom Hank's "Big" as part of their Tribeca Drive-In series. For a full schedule of screenings and events check their website (www.tribecafilm.com/festival).
